MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Mar. 17.—
President Harding has approved the note drafted in Washington by Secretary Hughes flatly rejecting the plea of the allies for a reduction of the $256,000,000 bill of the United States for the maintenance of the American army of occupation in Germany, it was learned today.

At the president's direction, Secretary Hughes was instructed to proceed in the Rhineland financial negotiations on the basis of the policy decided on by the administration several months ago.

While the reply which the state department will send to Paris for submission to the reparations commission was not made public here,
it was to make clear that the United States government looked with extreme disfavor upon the suggestion of England and France
that about $30,000,000 be cut off
the debt to make up money realized in this country for the sale of German ships.

President Harding is understood to have approved the plan for funding the Rhineland debt in twenty equal payments. He was informed

FIRECRACKERS MAY BE TABOO IN OHIO

The Fourth of July this year may be celebrated without firecrackers
and fireworks in Ohio.

The senate committee on manu-

Ohio.

In order to celebrate the Fourth this year with pyrotechnics the playful patriot will probably have to bootleg his fireworks into the state.

MAJORITY RULE IN IRELAND NOW SAFE, AVERS FITZGERALD

By DESMOND FITZGERALD, Minister for External Affairs of the Irish Free State.

DUBLIN, March 17.—Ireland has been made safe for majority rule.
That is one of the happy aspects of a year which has involved bitter decisions and unnecessary bloodshed in Ireland. With her elected legislature controlling for the first time her own army, police, finance and law courts, Ireland is recovering something of the enthusiasm for the new era which the actions of Mr. De Valera's followers had checked when the result of the Anglo-Irish negotiations was first declared. It is now a more stable practical, seeking to serve and build up a state worthy of the ideals of all the men who died for Ireland.

Today the Irish government is stronger than at any time since its establishment. Steady progress has been made in every department. The elimination of the Irregulars as a military factor increases daily the momentum of governmental development.

The revolt no longer attempts to maintain a military appearance. It has degenerated into a terrorism directed against individuals and unprotected houses and towns. The mass of the people have not been moved from allegiance to the gov-

Russia to Give Monopolies in Patents Again

Protective Laws To Be Modeled After Those
Of Germany Or U. S.

GOVT. BUYS SOME

Inventors Have Better Chance Of Reward Because Of Economic System

By ADELE PARKER

MOSCOW, March 17.—The re-establishment of patent monopolies in Russia on the lines of the patent laws of either America or Germany is but a matter of a short time, according to Ludwig C. K.
Martens, chief of the Scientific Technical Department of the Russian Government and chairman of the committee on inventions. The Council of Commissars has the subject under consideration, and the sudden rush of applications for patents is an indication that something is in the wind.

Martens, who is well known in America, is himself an inventor,
and during his six years' residence in New York took out several American patents.

In 1911 the highest point of Russian invention was reached, the Czar's Government in that year granting 2,500 patents, out of 5,400 applications. In 1917 patents to the number of 786 were granted,
but with the victory of the Bolsheviks all monopolies were abolished. In 1919 a decree was passed granting to inventors the right to claim reward, and since that time many valuable inventions have been rewarded by the Soviet Government.

MUST BE USEFUL.

"Our handling of the patent privileges will differ from that of other countries in this," said Martens.
"We examine the invention both for novelty and for usefulness. We shall grant patent rights only to mechanical contrivances which have some value in production.
There are now on file 4,803 applications for patent rights. Of these 250 have passed the tests of both novelty and utility. We deal only with industrial inventions. Literary productions can claim no reward from the Government, although authors have the exclusive

ANOTHER CATHOLIC STRUCTURE BURNED, LOSS $1,000,000

Nuns And Nurses Save Lives Of 350 Patients;
Is 17th Catholic Fire

MONTREAL, Que., March 17.—
The seventeenth Catholic structure was destroyed within the year when the Notre Dame DeGras, a Catholic hospital for incurables,
went up in flames Thursday night.
Heroic efforts of nuns, nurses and attendants saved the lives of 350 patients. The loss is estimated at $1,000,000. Little hospital property was saved from the flames.
The chaplain of the hospital braved the flames to remove the sacred host from the chapel, and a few possessions of a religious nature were taken from the blazing build-

Bandit Maid Is Going Straight After Release

"Honey" Sullivan, 18-
Year-Old Holdup
Queen, Was Leader Of
A Youthful Gang

CHICAGO, March 17.—When
"Honey" Sullivan winsome Evanston miss, walks forth from the State prison, her offenses against society atoned for, she's "going straight."

"Honey" led a band of youthful bandits who for a time terrorized Evanston with a series of daring holdups. Then followed the arrest of several members of the gang.
The more youthful members—one of them was only 15—soon broke down under the fire of questioning by experienced detectives and told all.

"SHEBA" LED "SHEIKS."

"Honey"—Elizabeth is her name
—was named as the "Sheba" leader of the band of "Sheik" robbers.
The girl, according to the story told police, was the general who planned the hold-ups. She also acted as a "lure"—luring some of the hold-up victims.

She pleaded guilty to the charges and was sentenced to serve an indeterminate term of from one to ten years. Along with her several of her "pals" were found guilty,
and sentenced to jail.

One of them, Burton Bone, son of a Peoria minister, was sentenced to serve from three to twenty years in prison.

This is the story the 18-year-old bandit queen told police:

"One day I met a gunman.
Through him I met Burton Bone.
I went with him to Peoria. We were there ten days, during which we lived in a house. Then we went back to Evanston.

"When we got back we picked up some of Bone's pals. We staged four hold-ups and stole six automobiles in the next two weeks.

NABBED IN STOLEN CAR.

"The night they nabbed us we started out in a stolen car. We met one of the gang in Evanston.
He suggested we rob Reinhold Hook, because his store was in a lonely place. Two of the fellows were to hold Hook, while another got the money. But they got 'cold feet.'"

"I decided to help them. They pushed me out when I went in the store, telling me to 'get to hell out of here.' After the 'job' was done we drove away and split the money.

"I didn't plan these 'jobs.' I did furnish the guns the boys used, though.

"They got us, and we've got to go to jail. All right. But I'm telling the world I'm going straight when I get out again. I've learned my lesson."

LONDON, March 17.—At a moment when Europe is hovering on the brink of chaos, it may seem a little remote from reality for the league of nations and its supporters to go on talking about disarmament. Unless, however, we are to throw up the sponge and be content to return to a condition of affairs where each nation is not merely judge, but also its own police officer in international dealings, we are driven once again to seek an alternative which can only be found along three definite lines, viz., a reasonable settlement of the problem of debts and reparations, the guarantee of France's eastern frontier against aggression, and a plan of European disarmament.

Like the persons in the Trinity,
these three objectives are not three policies, but one policy. All three are mutually dependent, and each one of them is the necessary complement of the other.

Storm Clouds Gather.

The nations who fought the war
by the side of France cannot possibly accept as final the view that the world's peace can only be maintained if Germany is kept crushed and divided. Nor does history encourage us to believe that France can in the long run do this.
Moreover, it means not merely that she abandons hope of reparation, but that she saddles herself with a policy costly in men and money, destructive of good-will and of commerce and credit, and one which leaves upon her alone the task of restoring the devastated areas.

There is no country in Europe
which could stand the triple burden of paying interest on a huge war debt, maintaining an army and navy on a pre-war standard and financing enormous sums to repair
the destruction of war.

But the effects of this policy are not confined to France alone, or even to Germany. It involves the abandonment by Belgium and Italy of their hopes for reparation, and for the former, at all events, this is

BASTROP, La., March 17.—The hooded mob murders of Morehouse parish, laid by Louisiana state authorities at the door of the Ku Klux Klan, were written into the pages of criminal history today, as an unsolved mystery. A feeling of tension swept the community in rish grand jury which branded as insufficient evidence the efforts of the state to punish the slayers of Watt Daniel and Thomas Richards, victims of a hooded mob. The grand jury completely absolved

the Klan of responsibility for the murder, after a 10 days' hearing.

Coue Popular In Paris After American Trip

Police Have Hands Full
With Crowds Who
Swarm To Nancy Druggist

By ALICE LANGLIER.

PARIS, March 17.—Five "blue-coats" were necessary to turn people away from Monsieur Coue's
first lecture in France after his return from America.

"But see, I have a ticket," argued many a weak-looking creature waving little blue tickets before the gendarmes.

"Pas bon, pas bon, Mesdames.
That's only an invitation; you must have a reserved seat." And that was all there was to it.

No one had the idea there would be such a great crowd, not even the little French druggist himself, for he took the trouble to seek out one of the smallest lecture halls in Paris. He didn't wish to speak to empty benches and he didn't. An hour before the lecture was to begin every seat was taken and not a free inch of standing room.

Before he left for his tour in the new world few Frenchmen had ever heard of Coue. The newspapers still give him little space and his light is still under a bushel.
He says that while in America he received patients from all over the country.

Several testimonials were read coming from Americans who were treated during his recent journey.
The most convincing one was from a young man who was able to take but a few steps at a time and who was constantly under the care of a doctor. At the time of writing the letter to Coue he had just passed the physical examination for the U. S. army and stated that he was able to do four or five miles of walking each day.

The little druggist commanded absolute silence while addressing his audience and during the evening gave demonstrations on several persons.

Monsieur Coue's head has not been turned by the great receptions and enthusiasm accorded him.
He is still the simple little man
from Nancy, and after the lecture made for a side door, endeavoring to escape the crowd which followed upon his heels determined to tell him of their ill.
"Every day in every way you are getting better and better," the little miracle man called after them and the crowd went away believing
it. Imagination is the ticket.

AMERICA PAYS LESS FOR ARMY FIGURES SHOW

Comparison Of Expenses Indicates Uncle Sam Is
Peace Loving Chap

OTHERS DISHONEST

Rate Of Soldiers' Pay Is Higher Here Than In Other Nations

WASHINGTON, Mar. 17.—Comparison of army cost figures for the seven leading nations of the world shows the United States to be the least militarist of all great powers, according to an exhaustive report by government statisticians made public here today.

The study was prompted by a conviction on the part of officials here that certain foreign powers are manipulating American figures in an attempt to cover up their own huge expenditures and thus offset charges of militarism. For months past, officials assert, there has been a vigorous propaganda in the United States designed to misrepresent American expenditures, including the question of foreign indebtedness to the United States.

Militarism, the report attempts to show, is not measured by the amount appropriated for national defense but by the number of soldiers maintained by existence or non-existence of conscription and by the ratio of military strength to national wealth, population and area of territory to be defended.
In none of these respects, the report indicates can the other great powers stand for a moment on the same footing with the United States.

Much of the misconception as to the comparative cost of the American army, the report says is due to misunderstanding of the rates of pay of soldiers in various countries. If American enlisted men were paid at the rate of the French Polus the United States could have for the amount now spent not 110,000 men but 2,517,700. If at the British rate 115,200 men, Italian 1,190,890 and Japanese 1,013, 100 men.

Another erroneous idea arises, it is said, from misunderstanding of the value of the dollar at home and abroad. For example a doughboy on the Rhine receiving $1 a day was the financial equal of the major of Coblenz, but in the United States he finds it impossible to support a wife on his pay.

The nations considered in the report are United States, Great Britain, France, Germany, Russia,
Italy and Japan. Of these Germany, France, Italy and Japan have conscription.

Germany, 1914; France, 1923

IN its current issue The Near Republic says: One of the curious illusions under which most of us labored after the outbreak of the World War was that there was such a thing as German militarism. It was no illusion that militarism existed in Germany, naked, strutting, detestable. Where we were hopelessly deluded was in ascribing it specifically to the German character, German political organization, German culture. Militarism is militarism, as we can see strikingly proved by the parallelism between French policy today and German policy of the first half of 1914.

It is remarkable how closely the French situation of 1923 parallels the German situation of 1914. The French army group surrounding Poincare differs only in color of hair from the army group that surrounded the Kaiser. In point of view and purposes the two groups are identical. The relation to the army of the munitions group centering in the Creusot works is identical with the old relations between Krupp and the German general staff. Big business in France is as definitely reaching for the coal of the Ruhr as German big business of 1914 was reaching for the ore of French Lorraine. The French press, pulpit and other organs of publicity are just as energetically occupied in building up the bogey of a German peril as the Germans were in building up the bogey of the Slavic peril. Even in details the parallel holds. Relatively to the French the Germans are numerous, prolific and backed by a portentous hinterland, just as the Slavs were relatively to the Germans. As everybody knows now, it would have been absolutely suicidal for the Slavs to have attacked the Germans singlehanded. It would be suicidal for the Germans to attack the French. But the German scaremongers made the plain German citizen shudder before an imaginative picture of Slavic strength, just as the French scaremongers are doing to the plain French citizen today.

The Germans are trying harder than Serbia did to avoid giving occasion for war. They have no greater circle of alliance to support their cause. German militarism encountered its own annihilation instead of the pleasant progress in prestige it had contemplated. French militarism, so far as any mortal eyes can see, can accomplish its will. Unless, indeed, fate has other designs.

Anderson and Prohibition

WILLIAM H. ANDERSON, head of the Anti-Saloon League in New York state has come into unenviable notoriety in his bailiwick thru the efforts of the liquor interests of the city of New York to "get his goat." Anderson's chief crime is that he is a scrapper and often alone and single-handed has been able to throw a monkey wrench into the otherwise smoothly working wet machinery in the nation's metropolis.

It would seem that his enemies are determined to undermine his influence thru charges of irregularity in the handling of the League's funds, despite the fact that the directors of the League in that state and all its officials declare that Anderson has had the full approval of the organization in everything he has done. In a recent issue The Globe of New York city presents the case fairly in reply to a letter that appeared in the People's Column of that paper. The Globe says:

"In another column appears the letter of a frankly 'wet' correspondent who questions the attitude of The Globe concerning the financial relation of William H. Anderson to the Anti-Saloon League. The fact that this paper did not condemn Mr. Anderson's suppositious sins with the vehemence regarded as adequate by the correspondent is counted an offense. Prohibition is so unpopular that, illogical as is 'A Wet's' position, many good citizens probably are in the same state of mind, and for this reason it may be useful to recall the circumstances of the case.

It may also be said incidentally that The Globe has never advocated prohibition. It favored temperance while the issue was debatable, but, as all the world knows, thru regular legal forms the constitution was amended and prohibition was decreed. The Globe is not an advocate of nullification. To this paper the need to enforce existing laws is paramount if a stable society is to be maintained. For this reason, so long as the eighteenth amendment is a part of the basic law it is entitled to the support of the citizenship.

The case of William H. Anderson involves both prohibition and his own personality. To Mr. Anderson attaches the opprobrium of the "dry" cause in a community which probably is "wet." This is a considerable burden. In addition to the dislike which would be felt for any man held responsible for depriving thirsty men of what they want, the superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League has by his atrocious manners cultivated a plentiful crop of personal enemies. Wholly apart from the issue of prohibition, it is difficult to avoid a distaste for the unmanly tactics of the dry leader.

To The Globe, however, these considerations make it a matter of honor to treat Mr. Anderson fairly. If he is guilty of any of the offenses imputed to him he ought to be treated as an ordinary practitioner of such crimes. But there has been a disposition in the community to reverse the ordinary American rule which holds a man innocent until proved guilty. Mr. Anderson has been asked to prove his innocence. This is not the customary procedure in the courts.

The Anti-Saloon League is a semi-political institution which probably ought to be compelled to make public both the sources of its funds and the nature of its expenditures. It is, however, expedient to recall that many other organizations of similar nature would be subject to any regulation compelling publicity from the league. If the rule affects an unpopular agency it would also apply to those better liked. The Globe, however, would be entirely willing to see a law enacted which demanded an accounting from all those who seek to influence public opinion.

The question of how the directors of the Anti-Saloon League pay their employees, whether by salary or commission, seems to be chiefly their concern. On the other hand, if the league has been defrauded, or if the federal government has been cheated of income taxes due, or if any other crime has been enacted, appropriate punishment should be inflicted on any one duly convicted. But it should not be forgotten that under the American system unpopularity is not a crime and no man is required to prove his innocence. Fortunately there is enough legal learning in the office of the district attorney to assure even the superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of the full enjoyment of his rights as an American citizen. That elementary consideration rather than a concealed affection for William H. Anderson or for the cause he represents has governed and must continue to govern the comment of The Globe.

BULGARIAN FUTURE GOOD, SAYS PREMIER

Stambolisky, Agrarian Leader, Claims Stability Due to Strong Policy

By CONSTANCE STEPHANOVE

SOFIA, March 14.—Stabilized government is an accomplished fact in Bulgaria, and the future of the Bulgarian people is bright, in the opinion of Premier Stambolisky, leader of the Agrarian Party. Peace with all the world, including neighboring states hitherto hostile, has been established, the Premier declares, and the strong policy of the Agrarian Government against internal enemies will stamp out those troublemakers within the nation.

The action of the Agrarian Government in dismissing three members of the Cabinet was cited by the Premier as evidence of the Government's determination to control the nation's affairs in the interest of the people. Finance Minister Tourakoff, War Minister Yaneff and Railroad Minister Manoloff recently were summarily removed from office for breach of trust.

MODEST ABOUT SELF.

"I am merely the nation's soldier fulfilling my mission as best I can," said Premier Stambolisky in an interview, "but I fear outside enemies less than those at home. The Supreme Peasant Council has performed what no other government or organization ever did in electing, pending due punishment, three Cabinet members for abuse of their authority contrary to the interests of the public welfare. We desire future ministers to understand the great responsibility that attaches to a ministerial post which is created, not for personal gain but for the welfare of the people."

SOCIETY

Call Phone 205

One hundred and fifty persons enjoyed the dinner and evening's program, given Friday, in the I. O. O. F. hall for the pleasure of members in the Kiwanis club, their wives and a number of guests, several of whom were Rotary club members.

Clay pipes, shamrocks, and Irish cutouts, suggestive of St. Patrick's Day, were effectively placed about the walls, while green crepe paper shades covered the lights. Small tables, arranged cabaret style about the large hall, leaving the center clear for dancing and the program of stunts, were especially pretty. An individual lamp graced each table, together with a blooming hyacinth. Miniature St. Patrick and Irish favors were given. Master Bobbie Weaver appeared in the opening number on the program, singing a group of songs. His one number "Keep Smiling," made a decided hit.

The main feature in the second number was the clever dancing and vocal act by an eight-year-old girl, a Miss Chadwick, presented by the George Law company of Uhrichsville, in connection with their novelty act.

F. Christinelli, of Dover, won hearty applause, presenting a group of songs to his own accompaniment on the accordion. Mr. Christinelli's numbers were a big hit, partially because of his unique Italian costume.

An amusing stunt of the evening was the contest and open discussion on the three presidents, Clyde Barnes, W. W. March and the present one, Thomas B. Anderson, pertaining to which is the better man. Later Mr. Barnes and S. J. Irwin were introduced to the guests as Jerry and the Judge in Billy Ireland's Passing show and gave a splendid impersonation, weaving in a number of local hits.

J. J. Dolan, as Lord Carnavan, brot to life King Tut, alias, Ambrose Hanley, who were pleasing in their dialogue, discussing the present generation. Not least among the entertaining numbers was the quartet, featuring Charles Mizer, Harry LaBlonde, Jack Berlean and Leon L. Loos. Mr. Loos was also very clever in presenting several selections on a saw.

Following the quartet's appearance, a telegram from Bud Fisher announced the Lord Carnavan and King Tut act to be a fake, but stated he was sending Mutt and Jeff, fittingly impersonated by C. D. Brooke and Kenneth Westfall, to open the tomb of King Tut. The arrival of the popular figures in the comic section was made by aeroplane. Harry Lybarger, as Sir Sid was prominent in the burlesque of the opening of the tomb, cleverly constructed in one corner of the room, and in bringing forth sundry articles from there. Lastly the old king himself appeared, this part being taken by L. M. Anderson. Mr. Anderson was delightful in his catchy song numbers.

Miss Vitus Mulvey and Miss Zulu Marshall were introduced as two traveling gypsy fortune tellers and furnished no little amusement as their part in the entertainment. The remainder of the evening was devoted to dancing. Hay's orchestra furnishing the musical program.

Much credit and praise is due the Entertainment Committee including Reid Wilkin, the chairman and his assistants, L. V. Nippert, L. M. Anderson and Francis X.

People here read with amazement some of the false or distorted versions of Irish affairs which are given out by the "Irregulars" missionaries in the United States. They talk of hundreds of thousands of Republicans in arms against the Free State; they declare the army is full of black and tans; they depict the Irish ministers as inspired by the lust of cruelty. Their hysterical imaginations run riot in an effort to stem the tide of public feeling against them and their war on the people.

The firmness of the Irish government has already had good effects; sovereignty of popular rule is safe in their hands.

right of publication. Trademarks are protected by law.

"In other countries it is commonly said," I remarked, "that the manufacturers rather than the inventors reap the great rewards from the patent laws. How will you protect the inventor?"

GOVERNMENT INDUSTRY.

"In other countries the inventor is financially weak, while the manufacturer is strong," replied Martens. "In Russia industry is largely in the hands of the Government. If a man has made an invention which the Government finds of great use to the country it will assist him to manufacture it. For instance, a young Russian workman at Nizhney Novgorod, Maimin, happily endowed with American energy and organizing ability, has been provided with facilities for manufacturing the tractor he has invented, which is especially adapted to Russian conditions."

"In other cases the Government has bought the patent outright. Among the important inventions which the Government has rewarded are several in the pest industries, several in radio-technique, excellent devices in wireless telegraphy and wireless telephony. The Tursar process of color printing, which prints all the colors at one stroke, was handsomely rewarded. From $5,000 to $100,000 has been paid by the Government for various inventions. Our workmen are offering important inventions. Among them are a coal cutting machine and a nail making machine. We shall grant patents to foreigners who file applications where the inventions fulfill the necessary conditions, and we expect many applications."

SETTLE

a serious sacrifice. It means that the attempt to attain an era of law and order among the nations of Europe will, in fact, break down elsewhere than on the Rhine. Already storm clouds are gathering in eastern and southeastern Europe, and it is obvious that the authority of the allied powers or of the league of nations to deal with such cases must suffer a serious eclipse.

Paralyzing Trade.

The paralyzing of trade thru the uncertainty of foreign exchanges will continue, and in particular the attempt of the league of nations to make an improvement in central and eastern Europe by putting Austria on its legs will be made far more difficult. Finally, one cannot enforce disarmament on other countries so long as a large standing army remains in France; and the burden which the Brussels conference in 1920 pointed out as being the main cause of the bad financial plight of most of the states of Europe, who between them were spending 20 per cent of their income on armaments, will continue.

If, on the other hand, means can be found for giving France security these disastrous consequences both to France and the rest of Europe can be avoided, and she herself can afford to accept a reasonable settlement of her reparation claim.

Given security for France, and that the question of reparations is considered merely as a business proposition, there should be no insuperable difficulty in reaching agreement.

It is true that France still thinks that Germany can pay more than most British and American experts think possible. But the divergence is not beyond reconciliation, and there is a great deal of common ground between the two points of view.

Toward Settlement.

The features of a settlement may be briefly summarized. In the first place the amount to be paid must be within Germany's capacity. It is a mistake to jump to the conclusion that this capacity has been permanently reduced to any serious extent by the depreciation of the exchange. The only test of any real consequence today is the opinion of the neutral and American money markets; for the final debt allocation to Germany must be such that the financial centers of the world will lend money to Germany as to a potentially solvent country.

Secondly, and rising out of this consideration, Germany must be given every inducement to pay off the capital liability as soon as possible by raising a loan, for until the debt to the allied governments is replaced by German securities hot and sold in London, New York, Amsterdam, Berlin and Paris, just as British war debt can be hot and sold, we shall always be living in the fear that the reparation question may revive and cause political uncertainty. The inducement to capitalize the debt can be offered on the one hand in the shape of a very heavy discount on early capitalization, and on the other in a promise to evacuate the Rhineland as rapidly as this capitalization is achieved.

If the political difficulties can be settled there is no economic reason why the whole of the indemnity should not be mobilized in the course of a few years.

Thirdly, the settlement must be a final one, otherwise no banker would lend a penny.

Fourthly, the settlement must apply to the inter-allied debts as well as to reparations. In this connection the most important point is that the British nation must reconcile itself to making a much more liberal offer to France than Mr. Bonar Law made last month in Paris.

French and British Shares.

According to the statement of the British delegation in Paris, the shares of France and of England, respectively, of the sum to be paid by Germany under the British scheme was:

France, 21½ milliard gold marks.

Great Britain, 18 milliard gold marks.

Against these figures Great Britain owed America 20 milliard gold marks, and France owes 11 milliard gold marks. The present value of Britain's American debt has already been reduced by the lowering of the rate of interest provided in the Washington agreement below current rates, and if the French debt were similarly written down, by say 33 per cent, we should have a surplus in hand if the Bonar Law scheme were realized, while France would have a net surplus of say 12 milliard gold marks.

This is not enough to pay for the restoration of the devastated areas. It is generally realized that the British government was prepared in Paris to make some concessions on the original figures and that it put its plan forward as the first stage in a bargain. But if we are to obtain agreement Great Britain must be prepared to admit—and I think opinion in this country would certainly accept the view—that the restoration of the devastated areas should be a first charge on whatever is receivable on reparations account. This condition would do more than anything else to make an agreement acceptable to France.

But how could we be certain that Germany would carry out such an agreement even if accepted as part of a plan which satisfied France's demand for security? For we cannot pretend that any nation would enjoy taxing itself to pay such large sums as would be involved in any settlement.

Germany's Inducement.

The answer is that Germany would have every inducement to honor the agreement for the following reasons:

1. A default on a settlement which was accepted as reasonable in America and neutral countries would be very different from default on a schedule of payment that everyone recognizes is quite impracticable, and such a default would shatter German credit.

2. To carry out the agreement would be the only way by which Germany could prevent renewed currency depreciation. It is true that at some stages of the process certain people may enrich themselves, but large classes suffer acutely, and when the intoxication proceeds beyond a certain point the temporary stimulus is succeeded by paralysis. Even the industrial leaders of Germany before the present crisis had become fearful of the effects of continued inflation.

3. There would be the greatest possible inducement for Germany to recover the political liberty of the Rhineland.

4. Finally, until the indemnity was entirely converted into private debt to individuals the economic sanctions of the treaty would apply, so it would be better still to substitute for these the forms of economic pressure which are provided in the covenant of the league of nations.

The discussion of plans such as these may seem today entirely academic and Utopian. But the night seems darkest (just before dawn, and turn of the wheel may at any moment bring them suddenly into the forefront of practical politics.

How You Can Exercise to Bring Beauty to Abdomen and Waist

By LUCREZIA BORI
The Famous Spanish Prima Donna

WHAT can I do to reduce my waist-line? or "What can I do to reduce my hips?" Many women ask these questions constantly. There is one thing that new exercises which bring beauty to the waist and hips.

You are likely to grow tired doing the same reducing exercise always, so it's a good idea to vary your program. It's much more fun doing different ones, anyway, and you may as well have as much fun out of it as possible.

If you are ingenious and if you understand enough about the exercises you

Two Positions of One Exercise That Will Help Create Beauty.

To understand what mission they perform, you may be able to work out new exercises for yourself—variations of the ones you already know.

In fact, if you do them thoroughly, you'll be sure to know what mission they perform, for more likely than not you will feel their effect in your unused muscles which they bring into play. But remember, never a new exercise leaves a decided aching in the way of aching muscles. Its good work has gone into effect. If you newly-used muscles ache, it's a sure sign that they have suffered from inactivity for too long and that the new exercise has reached in and brought into play these muscles that are weak from over-re-

The Words of Advice Katie's Loyalty to Madge Wrang from Her.

KATIE'S answer as to whether or not I meant to take Junior with me, was like a knife thrust. But there are no more of the emotional depictees as so often of the past. I have the particular obsession reaction which has seized me.

If there had been a question of my little girl's physical welfare I know that I would have turned back from my purpose of going away from my home. I would have been with her and Jim on the job. I knew that he would lack no care which even I could give him, and he was too young to grieve at my absence when all his other surroundings were his accustomed ones. Another sentence, not likely to be hashed itself into my remembrance.

"If only it were feasible for you to go away for a while, we wouldn't have to worry about the place here," Lillian had said upon written upon my arrival home. "For with you and your father gone there would be no interest here for their private schemes of vengeance or such big plans as this time house would be as safe as a church for Junior and the rest."

The words were both comfort to me and justification for my action. My father already gone, the only scruple I could have had against my flight was removed by the remembrance of my friend's words. My small son for a little while would be safe without me, and I would have leisure to think out my future plan of life.

Katie obeys Madge.

But I summoned all my resolution for the parting with him, and employed the time while waiting for him in writing a hasty note to Lillian, and the writing of a single line on a paper which I enclosed in a sealed envelope with Katie's name written on it when my little maid came back, a reluctant Junior trailing behind her. I spoke crisply, quickly.

"Go to your old room, quickly. Katie, and you and Junior get in the car. I'll let you out at the corner of the pasture, and you can walk back."

The habit of implicit obedience to me, strong upon her, Katie waited no time in questioning, but watched Junior up in her arms, and with a quick, subconscious housewife's removal of a kettle to the back of the stove, went out of the door and climbed into the car.

"Get—Get Don't Pay."

I followed her, and mounting to the seat behind the wheel, turned my switch key and sent the car down the drive to the road. Purposely I drove at my usual pace, knowing that Dicky or anyone else would suspect nothing seeing me driving the car home with Junior and Katie in the tonneau, for they frequently accompanied me on errands.

At the pasture bars I stopped, and turned to Katie.

"Please give this note to Mrs. Underwood," I said. "When she asks you where I have gone, not before, and in this envelope." I showed her the one on which I had written her name. "Is the address of the place where you can reach me if Junior should be sick or anything should happen that you need me badly. But," I said clearly, "remember that you are not to open this envelope unless you are sure that anybody asks you if you know where I have gone you can truthfully say that you do not know. Say nothing of this note, please. Promise me."

"You want me swear?" Katie asked.

"No, no," I said hastily, for I had had experience of the awful emphasis Katie put on her stern word. "Just promise me, that's all. And if you do think the time has come to show it, don't give it to anybody except Mrs. Underwood."

"All right, I promise," Katie said fervently, then she put her hand on my arm, and her eyes were troubled.

"Please excuse me," my darling, Miss Graham, but you going away cause you fight so bad by Meester Graham dis morning?"

I was so astonished that I forgot my dignity.

"How did you—"

She evidently sensed my alarm, for she promptly allowed it.

"Oh, nobody else know," she said. "But I got to go home to Meester Graham, he told me to go home like you c-y-cloze, and I heard heem say something bad by you, about that Joon may dot time ven he get so mad by me oter dot Joe. Und, oh, my darling Miss Graham, I don't want you to feel so bad like me!"

"Please excuse me," my darling, Miss Graham, I don't want you to feel so bad like me!"

I was destined to hear Katie's words echoing in my ears many times, but just now I could think of nothing save the humiliating similarity between her own recent experience and mine.

"I'll remember what you say, Katie," I said the first thing which came into my mind, and I'll be back soon. Take good care of Junior, please."

I swept my little lad into my arms, kissing him tenderly.

My mother's going after something nice for you, she said. "Be a good boy and mind Katie."

KNITTED SPRING FROCKS

Perfect Fit Is Essential to Knitted-Dress Style

By ANNETTE BRADSHAW

THE knitted frock has been with us for several seasons, but it grows more attractive as time progresses, for the later models are smarter in cut and design than the first frocks that were made here.

To appear at its best, the knitted dress or suit must fit perfectly, for defects such as a sagging shoulder seam or a skirt that doesn't hang well are glaring in a garment of this type.

The sportswoman finds a simple knitted frock ideal for her outdoor activities. But the knitted frock doesn't adapt itself to this use alone. It is very smart also for street wear.

Here are two lovely models that may be worn morning or afternoon. Two shades of blue are charmingly combined in the silk knitted dress at the left. The background is powder-blue while the inset blocks are in dark blue.

The other model combines two colors and two mediums, for the darker bands are in fine brown wool and the lighter portions in silk of a lovely pale gold tint. These two are lovely together. One smart frock uses the same combination except that the threads are woven in together.

THE HOME KITCHEN

By JEANNETTE YOUNG NORTON
The Authority on Home Cooking

Seven Delicacies That Are at Their Best in Springtime.

EARLY spring foods do not mean as much in these modern hot-house days as they did long ago when we were entirely dependent upon our own gardens and orchards for each fruit or vegetable in its appointed season. Not only we cannot, bottled, dried and boxed food at our command nowadays, but hot-house products are on sale all winter. Strawberries are no longer a novelty even in winter.

These delicacies are sold at top-notch prices, but that does not seem to keep them away from cold-climate tables.

We are even getting hot-house greens. Older-fashioned people would laugh to think of getting beet greens and dandelions grown under glass in March instead of waiting until May or June to pick them out of the ground. Nevertheless, they are good for us even if they do come a little high, and this takes the sting out of the price.

Dandelions

Remove all the roots from the dandelions and wash the leaves thoroughly. Trim the greens into a sautépan, cover them with salted water and cook them over a low fire for one hour. Allow two cups of water to two pecks of the leaves.

When done drain them, season them with pepper, salt, a generous lump of butter, and the juice of a large lemon or an equal amount of tarragon vinegar.

Stewed Green Onions

Trim off the largest long leaves from four bunches of green-topped onions. Then stew them until they are tender in slightly-salted water. When done, drain and lay them on slices of buttered, crustless toast. Have ready a light cream sauce to pour over the onions. Garnish with a hard-boiled egg put through the ricer.

Watercress and Radish Salad

Trim and wash as much fresh watercress as needed. With the kitchen scissors clip it into convenient pieces. Trim and wash the radishes, and cut red radishes to make a cupful and a half. Wipe the inside of the salad-bowl with a cut bulb of garlic. Put in the watercress and radishes, and toss over all enough French dressing to which the juice of an onion has been added—to moisten the salad.

New Potatoes

Wash and boil as many new potatoes as are needed. When they are done, drain and place them in a hot dish.

Have ready a heating tablespoonful of melted butter, and add to it pepper, salt, a teaspoonful of sugar and a tablespoonful of fresh mint leaves washed and chopped. Stir the butter and sugar, potatoes and serve them. If mint is not at hand, parsley may be used. New potatoes have not reached maturity, and the starch grains are not ripened, so the potatoes are considered by some persons, indigestible for invalids and young children.

Early Rhubarb

Delicate pink rhubarb stalks of hot-house growth are a bit expensive when they first arrive at market, so the best way to prepare them is to wash and cut them into inch lengths, then steam them in a very small quantity of water, sweetened to taste. Early rhubarb makes a very tasty sauce for cold meats when the stalks are cut into small pieces and added to the mixture. It may be peeled and served with cream for a dessert.

Sweetbreads

Select a large pair of sweetbreads. Plunge them into cold water, then pour them into a very small quantity of water, and throw them into cold water and let them stand five minutes. Drain them and trim them. Put a quarter-pound of butter in a saucepan, and add a quarter of a cup of cream. Add the sweetbreads, and cook with this mixture, during a little longer than the time for a medium oven.

Veal Cutlets

Pry two slices of veal cutlet in butter. When they are done lift them to a plate. Add a cupful and a half of milk to the pan, shaken with butter and flour creamed, and turn over the meat. Garnish the cutlets with stuffed, baked potatoes.

ADVICE TO GIRLS

By ANNE LAURIE

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE: I am a girl 17 years old, and am engaged to a man almost four years older than I. Do you think that he is too old for me?

After we became engaged he never asked me to give up my other young men friends, but said he wanted me to have a good time, and that he knew if I really loved him I would give them up of my own accord. I know that he does not go with other girls. Do you think he really loves me?

We have gone together one year and have never quarrelled. All of my friends quarrel, so I am really puzzled. Am I too young? I will be 18 several months before we are married. DOLLY DIMPLE.

DOLLY DIMPLE: The young man is not too old for you, my dear, and if your family approve of your marriage there is no reason why you should not be very happy.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE: I am a woman 21 years old. I have been married and have two little boys. I have been keeping company with a man a few years older than myself for six years, and he never asked me to marry him until just a few days ago, and then only because he found out I was paying attention to some one else.

About one year ago I met a nice man and he has asked me to marry him. He is a very nice man, and has money. The other one always told me he would never marry until he found out some one else wanted him. Then he changed his mind. So please advise me. Which one do you think is the better for me to choose? WILLY ROSE.

WILLY ROSE: Marry the man you love, my dear.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE: I am a girl 19 years of age. I never had young men friends. I have invited several of them to come and see me, but none of them has called. I am quite popular with girl friends who have steady young friends.

Please advise me how I may have young men friends.

HURRY-BROKEN: Why don't you give some small parties at your home? In this way you will be more better acquainted with young men, and they will invite you out in return.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE: I am a girl 17 years of age. I have been keeping company with a young man for some time, although there is nothing serious between us. I have often gone to his home to have the evening away from my parents. He is a very nice man, but as his parents have their home furnished a good deal better than mine, I have never asked him to come to my home. What do you think is simple, but nevertheless, the house is always clean.

Do you think it foolish of me not to let him down just on this account? My friends have told me it is not the furniture he comes to see, but me. ANXIOUS.

ANXIOUS: Invite the young man to your home by all means, my dear. You are not too young to do this. You are sure your home is very agreeable. You should never be ashamed of it because it is your home.

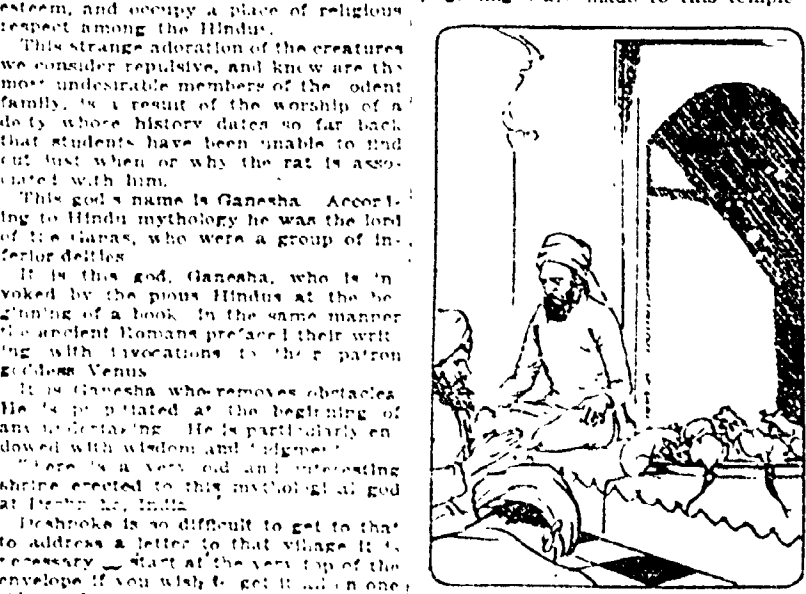

It is a grand idea of a young man who makes a home attractive. It is the spirit which is in it and the charm with which you receive your guests.

Annie Laurie will welcome letters of inquiry on subjects of feminine interest from young women readers of this paper and will reply to them in these columns. Letters to Miss Laurie should be addressed to her, in care of this office.

Three-Minute Journeys

By Temple Manning

WHERE A TEMPLE STANDS IN HONOR OF SACRED RATS.

In Ganesha Temple.

AT 11 in India this isn't an expensive of disgust or detestation. Nor are the animals themselves despised or looked upon as a menace. On the contrary, they are held in high esteem, and occupy a place of religious respect among the Hindus.

This strange adoration of the creatures we consider repulsive, and know are the most undesirable members of the animal family, is a result of the worship of deities whose history dates so far back that students have been unable to find out when or why the rat is associated with him.

This god's name is Ganesha. According to Hindu mythology he was the lord of the Hindus, who were a group of inferior deities.

It is this god, Ganesha, who is invoked by the pious Hindus at the beginning of a book, in the same manner that our Romans pray at their writing with invocations to the patron God, Venus.

It is Ganesha who removes obstacles. He is a god who is the beginning of an undertaking. He is particularly endowed with wisdom and judgment.

There is a very old and interesting story about this god's origin. It is said that Brahma is so difficult to get to that a devotee is not allowed to enter his temple until he has written a letter to him. The letter is written on a piece of paper, and is placed in a small box, and is then thrown into a river. The river is said to be the Ganges, and the letter is said to be carried to the god by a rat.

For this reason many rats live in the temple. The travelers who make pilgrimages to this temple of Ganesha are made to this temple of Ganesha.

ODD and INTERESTING FACTS

The National Association of Master Pie Bakers says Chicago is the greatest pie-eating city in the United States. Residents of the Windy City daily consume an average of 75,000 pies. According to the same authority, New York stands second, about 50,000 pies are consumed there daily. Philadelphia comes third with 50,000. Fourth place goes to Los Angeles, where 40,000 pies are consumed daily. Boston is a close rival.

Of the 25 different kinds of pie made, apple pie is the universal favorite, according to the National Association of Master Pie Bakers. Raisin pie holds second place, with lemon a close third. Plum pie is advancing in popular favor. Almond pie seems to be losing ground. Pumpkin pie is very popular in New England and the Atlantic states.

Two cities which in the middle ages and before were seaports for the Vikings, have been discovered on the coast of Sweden. The names of the lost towns were Gamla Ledosa and Nya Loresa. There the seafaring Norsemen came for bargains and battle, and mention of "houses of music" indicate that they were popular ports for the sailors. The discoveries are expected to throw much light on early Scandinavian civilization.

The will of Charles Dickens contained the following clause: "I confide my friends on no account to make me the subject of any monument, memorial or testimonial whatsoever. I rest my claims to the remembrance of my country upon my published works, and to the remembrance of my friends upon their experience of me in addition thereto."

And in his garden were little blue lakes, crossed by a network of ivory paths—and along the shores of the lakes struts flocks of white peacocks with collars of silver blazing with emeralds or blue with the bluest turquoise.

And the dancing girls, even to the humblest of them, wore anklets of bronze and copper, and brass and silver and gold, so that as they walked there was a tinkling like the ringing of exquisite bells.

And veils they wore—embroidered veils from Cashmere and from the far countries of the distant and secret East.

Droves of camels as fleet as the wind he had—the great king whose tomb has just been opened by the hands of aliens.

Light-footed horses, too, bred from a proud stock, and boats with sails of heavy silk, and oars that were set in rows of beaten gold.

Oh, it was great luxury he enjoyed, this king of a great people!

But the best light he could afford was a candle. And the best heat he knew was a handful of sticks. And his bed was a rug thrown upon stones. And how long would the feet of his camels last beside the cheapest silver that was ever driven?

What a Contrast!

When he wanted to send a message to a brother king a few hundred miles away, he had to outfit a caravan and send them for a month's journey across the desert, and neither he nor anyone else knew whether the message would ever be delivered or not.

No telegraph, wire—no telephone—no radio for him.

If he had shored him on one reel of a single motion-picture he would have had him burned alive or drowned in boiling oil for a wizard.

And as for a railroad train, or a steamer, or an airplane—pouf! Why, he would have thought anyone who even hinted at the existence of such things a dangerous madman!

Poor old king! How little he really had with all his magnificence.

The other day I met a woman just home from a course of lessons at a great university in a foreign country.

And she knew French and Italian, and Latin and Greek, and she had a smattering of German, and could even translate Sanskrit.

And she hadn't an idea of her own in the world.

Not an idea! Everything she said was something she had learned from a book or that some one else had told her. Something that some one else had learned in a book, too.

A beaten candlestick of gold to hold a flickering, inefficient, ridiculous light.

And yesterday I saw a beautiful woman—what eyes, what a skin, what a cloud of shining hair! But when she opened her mouth, what a voice, and when she smiled, what a disillusion!

Avarice, malice, envy, jealousy—they screamed in her voice and grinned in her smile.

A candlestick of gold—to hold a guttering candle.

I'd like to see the king's golden candlestick—wouldn't you?

But when it comes to a light, I'll take the good old electric standby with a switch handy at the head of the stairs, thank you!

Good Night Stories

By Blanche Silver

WHY CATPILLAR SPINS HIS NEST. Oh, dear me! sighed Young Caterpillar, "I'm getting so tired of walking around over those trees. I wish I had a home like most folks have."

"Why not live in the fork of this tree like I do?" croaked Mrs. Tree-Frog. "It's such a nice breezy place. You can see everything that goes on without leaving your front doorway. Why, I wouldn't live anywhere else."

"Neither would I if I were a tree-frog," replied Young Caterpillar. "But do you think it the proper place for a caterpillar?"

"Well, I should say it would be," answered Mrs. Tree-Frog. So Young Caterpillar chose a lovely fork in the apple tree and settled himself for a rest. But the cool breezes blew, and as he grew sleepy he became chilly.

"Oh, dear," he sighed, "I don't like this, and every day I seem to be lazier than I was the day before. Why, sometimes I can hardly keep my eyes open. I can't seem to fix myself comfortably. I'm so restless."

"Well, of course! Now, if I were a caterpillar," croaked Mrs. Tree-Frog, "I might know what to tell you to do. But I'm just a tree-frog, and all tree-frogs live in trees. But maybe Billy Bluejay might be able to tell you something."

"Say, say, say!" exclaimed Billy Bluejay, who had just alighted in the tree in time to hear Mrs. Tree-Frog's last remark. "If it's anything about building a nest, I'm right there, for my wife and I have the finest one you ever saw."

"A nest," mused Young Caterpillar, "all fashioned out of sticks and grass. I know I don't want it. And Young Caterpillar crawled off to keep himself warm."

He crawled down the tree trunk onto the ground. Then he hurried off across the fields. Toward evening he was just so tired and sleepy he didn't know what to do. So, seeing a tree, he crawled up and out to the end of a twig to look over the country.

"Peep, peep, peep," sounded almost under him, and Young Caterpillar looked down. There, peeping out from two leaves, which were cleverly fastened together, were two baby birds, crying for their mother.

Young Caterpillar did not have to wait very long before the mother bird returned. Her bill was laden with goodies for the youngsters, and Young Caterpillar spoke to her.

"Well, now it's too bad your mother failed to teach you," she began, when Young Caterpillar interrupted her by saying he had never known any mother. "Worse still," she continued. "But there's only one thing for a caterpillar to do. That is build himself a house. I like leaves. Can you sew?"

"Goodness, no, I can't!" replied Young Caterpillar. "But that just makes me think—I can spin."

"My goodness! Then take two leaves and spin around them," suggested Mrs. Tailor Bird. "We tailor birds always like leaves to fashion our nests out of. So why shouldn't you caterpillars?"

This suited Young Caterpillar, and before long he had a lovely cocoon made out of two leaves. When night came Young Caterpillar curled up in the leaves and was soon warm and sound asleep in his comfortable and cozy little cocoon.

GIRLS' GAME WAS ONE-SIDED AFFAIRMulvey's Squad Gives
Them 46-10 Drubbing;
Play Warren Next Sat.

The Coshocton varsity girls added another to their long string of victories when they walloped the McConnellsville high school quintet at Grace M. E. church on Friday night. The one-sided score was 46 to 10.

Miss Leona Deneer and Miss Virginia Ulman won the admiration of the fans and their teammates last evening by their clever playing. Miss Deneer made 15 baskets, or 20 points. She made two baskets almost the length of the floor from the cage. At these times the fans went wild.

The McConnellsville lassies did not show much class against Mulvey's speed demons. The locals took the ball at will.

The first half ended 20 to 2 in favor of Coshocton. Miss Ulman did creditable work at guard, preventing the opposing forwards from making a single basket and from even penetrating the local goal.

Miss Delores Eddy netted the local three field goals and Miss Guida Wolfe, two. Miss Wolfe shot and made six fouls.

The only baskets made on the opposing side were caged by Miss Pauline Spung. She made two. Miss Evelyn Zumbro shot and made six fouls.

This is the second time McConnellsville has been beaten by Coshocton. McConnellsville won all their other games last season. The local girls have lost only one game this season, that to the Frazeeburg lassies.

Mulvey's basketballers close the season here Saturday night of next week with one of the most noted girls' teams in the state, Warren high. Warren was the only girls' aggregation that defeated Coshocton last season. No doubt a large crowd will see the girls close the season at home. The game is to be played at the M. E. gym.

SUSPECT ADMITS
THEFT OF JEWELS

NEW YORK, March 17. — A surprise was sprung today in the Shoelkopf $300,000 gem robbery when Matthew Biddulph, known to the police as Marshall and indicted under that name, pleaded guilty to robbery in the first degree before Judge Thomas Crain in general sessions.

Three counts had been handed down by the grand jury against him namely: first degree robbery, first degree assault and criminally receiving stolen goods.

He has been away from the whitehouse for 13 days today, has traveled five states, travelled by train, ship and motor, seen thousands of people—all without making a single speech.

The president wound up his stay in Miami today. Late this afternoon he will turn his face northward for a long, leisurely journey back to Washington. He will leave at 5 p. m. by special train for Palm Beach, arriving there about 8 p. m. Plans to board the Pioneer immediately have been made. The Pioneer will host another for the return trip up the Indian and Haiti fax toward St. Augustine tomorrow.

The schedule is indefinite. There will be stops for golf along the way, but an effort will be made to reach St. Augustine by March 24.

Missionary Sermon
By Boy Preacher

Carl T. Hoop, boy preacher of Coshocton, will preach at Trinity on Sunday, March 18. The service will begin at 7:30 o'clock. He will preach a missionary sermon, touching upon the work of the mission in the foreign lands.

The schedule is indefinite. There will be stops for golf along the way, but an effort will be made to reach St. Augustine by March 24.

BY HAMMILL

COURT AND BADGES.

A court of honor was held Friday night to accommodate the boy scouts seeking higher lodges and who could not be present on last Wednesday. The examiners were W. McManus, W. Dickerson and S. Hensley.

Troop 6 had one scout to join the enrollment of 50,000 and receive his tenderfoot badge. Four of the members of Troop 6 were graduated to the second step of scouting and received their second class badges. One received his first class badge.

Troop 6 has now registered and the members received their cards last night. The cards came as a surprise to the scouts.

A senior patrol leader was also elected last evening and the two candidates were Lawrence Foster and Jack Bentley. Troop 1 was also represented at the court of honor last night and had two second class scouts to obtain their badges. Troop 9 had one tenderfoot to pass his tests.

Wester Bucher's Coshocton High school varsity quartet lost its last game of the season Friday night to the fast O. S. S. D. aggregation at Columbus by a score 34 to 24.

The game was the roughest one participated in by the locals. Coach Bucher said Saturday. Nine personal fouls were called on the home aggregation while only one was marked against the local team.

The defense of the locals was weak during the opening of the contest and it allowed the Columbus five to get a comfortable lead. The Coshocton lads were never able to overcome the Columbus lead except during the opening of the second half. The first period ended 22 to 15 in favor of the state school.

At the beginning of the second period the Red and Black held their opponents scoreless for quite awhile. Squire added a few more points and the score stood 25 to 22, but the handicap of the small court was too much for C. H. S. and their chances went glimmering when Holdren caged three in a row.

Squire was the leading scorer with six field goals and Wilson added ten points; Captain Wagner netted one goal. In addition to his scoring, Squire's consistent floor work was his best this season. He was easily the shining light of the Red and Black.

On Tuesday night at 8 o'clock the varsity appears against the faculty in their annual tilt. The game is to be played at the M. E. gym. The faculty has many new recruits this time to stack up against the varsity.

Following is the lineup and summary:

GERMANY URGED TO SUBMIT A NEW
INDEMNITY OFFER

LONDON, March 16.—All possible encouragement today was placed before Germany to induce her to make a new reparations offer in an effort to restore peace between the French and Germans in the Ruhr. Altho Premier Bonar Law formally announced in the house of commons that the way is open for Germany to submit an offer for settlement of the Ruhr issue, the foreign office was silent on Britain taking part in the settlement.

Another official said there was a possibility of negotiations being renewed. The French have announced that the Paris government will give careful consideration to any offer Germany may make. They evidently wish to set at rest the fear that German offers would be set aside without consideration.

German industrialists are reported to be bringing the utmost pressure upon the Cuno government at Berlin to make an offer based upon outlines laid down by the mine and mill owners themselves.

It is understood that if Germany takes the first step, Great Britain will likely urge that the German offer be carefully considered as the basis for further negotiations. While Bonar Law is opposed to such intervention, certain members of the cabinet have advised Germany that if they make reasonable proposals, British public opinion will force the premier to follow them up.

NEW YORK, March 17. — A surprise was sprung today in the Shoelkopf $300,000 gem robbery when Matthew Biddulph, known to the police as Marshall and indicted under that name, pleaded guilty to robbery in the first degree before Judge Thomas Crain in general sessions.

Three counts had been handed down by the grand jury against him namely: first degree robbery, first degree assault and criminally receiving stolen goods.

OBJECT SERMON IS GIVEN TO PORTRAY
POWER OF FAITH

The largest attendance of the week heard the Rev. George M. Landis preach an object sermon to the children and young people last night at the First Baptist church.

The speaker publicly expressed his thanks for the reports the Tribune is giving of the meetings. He said: "We feel indebted to the Coshocton Tribune for the accurate and full reports which it is giving to the meetings. Many are thus able to read the sermons who are unable to come to the services. We have never received more courteous treatment from any paper."

The Rev. Mr. Landis gave an object sermon on the subject: "The Key to the Heart." He had a nicely carved heart on the desk. The door was locked. He then showed how Jesus Christ stands at the door of each heart and knocks, seeking admission. The speaker said: "The Lord does not break His way in like a burglar. You must open your heart and invite Him in."

"We need to find some key which will unlock the heart, and let Jesus Christ come in to dwell there." Mr. Landis then had seven children come in succession to the platform and, giving to each a key, had them try to open the door. The first key tried was the key of Good Resolutions. This failed to open the heart. The next key was a very large one, named Good Works. A ripple of laughter went over the congregation as a little tot tried to use this key, which was larger than the heart itself. The speaker said: "You may well laugh at the foolishness of trying to open the heart with this clumsy key. But it is not half so foolish as for a man or woman to try to get into heaven by their own works. For it is 'not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to His mercy that He saves us. If we could be saved by this key, we would walk up and down the golden streets of heaven swinging it around our heads, and telling everybody there of the wonderful things which we had done. Jesus Christ would not get a single word of praise or glory for our salvation."

The key of education was then tried, but to no avail. Mr. Landis said: "We would not say one word against education. It is a good and wonderful thing; but as an agency of salvation, it is absolutely worthless. The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom," so says the word of God. A college or university diploma is not a passport to glory."

The golden key of religion was next tried. Several of the children raised their hands, signifying that they were sure this key would open the heart. It also failed. The speaker explained the failure in this manner: "Religion may not be salvation. Nicodemus was a very religious man, but Jesus said to him: 'You must be born again; in India they are very religious; much more so than we are in America. We have only one God to worship; while in India they have over 3,000,000 gods. But all of these gods are unable to save them. So if you are depending upon religion for your salvation, you may be lost, and will be if you do not have the right kind of religion."

Next followed the keys of Sorrows and of Prayer. Of the failure of these keys to open the door of the heart, the speaker said: "Here are two good keys. We all admit that sorrow for sin is a good sign; but a man might weep an ocean of tears and still be lost. The man convicted of murder is not freed from the penalty of his deed because he sheds many tears before the judge, and says that he is sorry for what he has done. So too, prayer is a very good thing. Every boy and girl ought to pray, and pray much more than they do. Every Christian here tonight should pray. But prayer cannot save us, unless it is accompanied by something else. Salvation is a free gift. We do not plead for offered gifts, we take them."

Finally the key of faith was used, and it opened the heart. Mr. Landis said: "There are some people who put the key of faith in the lock, but never turn it in the lock. They are not very far from the kingdom, but are nevertheless on the outside. It is faith in the death and resurrection of Jesus Christ that saves us. 'Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved.' Philip Brooks gave this definition of faith in the form of an acrostic: 'For-saking All I Take Him.' Let us open the door of our hearts by the key of faith, and let Jesus Christ come in tonight."

Tonight Mr. Landis will speak on "The Latest Styles in Fig Leaves." Bible study in Romans at 2:30. All are invited.

Educational Tooth
Talks

By DR. C. E. MULLIGAN

Home treatments have been responsible for more than one set of artificial teeth. Toothache remedies, appliances of different sorts often give temporary relief, but that is as far as they ever go. They cannot cure, or even retard, they can only ease the pain for the moment. No one can tell at what instant an exposed nerve will start forth in all its fury; it may be just as you are ready to go off to the theatre, a party or a visit. Home remedies are all right, as far as they go; but they should never be allowed to take the place of a dentist. A dentist can cure you, home remedies may give you temporary relief but they can also lull you into a false security from which you are due to a rude awakening.
